

AboutHealth

AboutHealth was developed and announced in August 2014 to build upon and advance clinical quality, efficiency and customer experience attributes that are well-documented and shared between its current eight organizations. This strategic partnership is a new way for patients to access the highest quality health care across the state and region.

- The network is working toward clinical integration.
- The organization's name came about because each partner is "about health" for patients and communities served.
- AboutHealth expects the network to serve as a new model of health care delivery for the nation.
- It promises lower costs to employers who agree to use the services of AboutHealth's members.
- As of May 12, 2015, AboutHealth offers access to 46 hospitals and 6,380 physicians.
- AboutHealth CEO is Greg Devine.
- Wisconsin's other network is Integrated Health Network (IHN), which formed earlier than AboutHealth.
